Faceted House 1, Hammersmith, London by Paul McAneary Architects

26 January, 2011 | By Alex Nikjoo

[SMALL PROJECTS 2011] Remodelling and extension of an Edwardian terrace house

The house sits within a conservation area in Hammersmith, London. The two storey house was in a decrepit state, the client asked that the remodelling be contemporary, functional and allow for a perception of the domestic space continuing into the garden.

The design is based around a 30° twist in the plan that gives both physical and perceptual overlapping of the interior and exterior spaces that improves natural daylighting. The new extension is defined from the original structure by the use of materials. Glass panels and a faceted roof are used on the extension. The interior flooring material is drawn into the garden contracting with the worn timber and green garden walls to create a relaxing space.

Completion date 2009
Gross external floor area 185m<sup>2</sup>
Contract value £140,000
Client Kent Hoskins
Architect Paul McAneary Architects
